STRICT SECRECY STILL MAINTAINED IN REGARD TO THE PRISONERS

Devonport, Feb. 24.-The stramer Victoria, with ton or London. The strictest secrecy was of served in regard to the prisoners, and nobody was allowed on board the ship. No one on board the Victoria knew the destination of the steamer, but it was expected that she would be taken off. The Lancaster Regiment, which was brought here by the Victoria, was landed this morning. The officers say that Dr. Jameson and his companions are all in the second-class cabin. During the voyage they were allowed to see the Jameson is in charge of Major McCarthy of the Lancaster Regiment. There are no civil officers on board the Victoria. A swarm of reporters who have been watching for the Victoria for two days and nights without sleep are running docks, but not a scrap of information beyond what has aiready been told is obtainable. Major Collins, of the Lancaster Regiment, says that Captain Heany, an American, who took part in the raid, was informed that, on his arrival at Plymouth, he would be free to disembark. He declined, however, to leave the Victoria, saying that he preferred to remain with Dr. Jameson. Captain Heany formerly held a commission in the Rhodesian Horse. He accompanied Dr. Jameson's expedition as a

The committee of the Stock Exchange to-day suspended a member for a week for bringing two of Dr. Jameson's troopers into the Exchange, thereby causing a mixed demonstration. A representative of the United Press to-day obtained an interview with one of Dr. Jameson's troopers, who arrived at Plymouth from Port Natal yesterday morning. The man, whose name is O'Dea, said that he had spent eight months in Matabeleland as a member of the mounted police. About the end of December he was recovering from a violent attack of fever. He had been almost without food or water for a week and was lying in his tent in a greatly debilitated condition, when a sergeant came to him and asked him if he wanted to lose his place in the mounted troop. C'Dea repiled in the negative, whereupon the sergeant ordered him to appear on parade with his comrades immediately, which he did. Before the start of Jameson and his fol-lowers for the Transvaal, which took place at night, O'Dea did not hear Dr. Jameson read a let-ter, as he is alleged to have done, but says he gathered that the purpose of the expedition was to protect the women and children of Johannes-burg. O'Dea belonged to the advance troop. He did not see Dr. Jameson after the night of their leaving Mafeking, nor has he seen him to this day. He supposes that Jameson rode in the mid-dle of the troops. The men hurried forward, riding at the rate of ten miles an hour, with not more than five hours' rest in two days. They had several skirmishes with Boers before reaching Krugersdorp, where the Boers succeeded in en-ticing Jameson's forces from the shelterel hillocks-into the open veldt, while they themselves re-mained under cover.

THE HOISTING OF THE WHITE FLAG. O'Dea expressed the belief that Jameson himself holsted the white flag, or, if he did not personally hoist it, it was raised by his order, When the Jameson party surrendered, O'Dea still had ten rounds of ammunition and many of the others had not exhausted their supply. of the others had not exhausted their supply. After the surrender, he said, the men were fairly well treated. They were taken to Pretoria, where they were corrailed on the Pretoria racecourse. They received a lost of bread and a quarter of a pound of ment a day for each man. At first he believed that all the officers and men of the expedition were to be shot. He heard afterward that the Volksrand had He heard afterward that the Volksraad had bejected a proposal to shoot them by a majority of two. Eventually the men were taken to Port Natal, where they were free from the moment they went on board the Harisch Castle. O'Dea said it was his intention to visit Boston, Mass., and later to return to the service of the British South Africa Company. In the course of his conversation he aliuded to several of his comrades, mentioning Cawston, of New-York, and Morgan of Montana. O'Dea gave his address as No. 198 Centreest, Boston, Like all the other troopers who arrived in England on the Harisch Castle, he received $22 before landing, and expects to receive $100 in addition to this from the British Fouth Africa Company.
